- Approximately 2000 men of the Federal Police of Argentina have recently requested to be dropped from the force. It is reported that general working conditions, the hard discipline, and the low pay were the reasons for this action.
- Over 200 members of the Federal Folice are now under arrest in the barracks of the mounted police in the Palermo section of Buenos Aires because of disciplinary breaches and absences without leave. Folice cadets have had to perform the duties of regulars in some local stations.
- 3. A new police course was cancelled for a month because out of the 200 students required to make up the class only 15 enrolled.
